Amongst the manuscripts which from time to time have found their way into the Council room of the Percy Society, were two folio volumes consisting of ballads, songs, and poems, taken down by Mr. P. Buchan of Peterhead, N. B. from the oral recitation of the peasantry of his country. These folios were compiled long before the Percy Society was in existence, and solely for the amusement of the transcriber, who has for years been well known to the anticpiarian world as a most indefatigable collector of traditionary poetry. Mr. Buchan s labours as a Ballad hunter (a phrase which it will be seen is not ours), have elicited the praises of no less celebrated a man than the late Sir Walter Scott, one of the last acts of whose life was inspecting Mr. Buchan s manuscript collection of old ballads, which he pronounced decidedly and indubitably original.
