The political horizon of tho Old World is at present obscured by gathering clouds; however we may speculate or surmise, it is only when the pall shall have risen that we can comprehend the sequel. The three great powers now drawn up in hostile array havo cxtensivo possessions in this ocean; but such is tho position of their mutual and opposing interests, that the arena of strife must evidently bo confined to continental fields, unless thero occur a new phase in national policy, which none would wish to anticipate, to sever the bond of amity between two great maritime nations at present so cordially fraternizing. Wo cannot suppose that the Russian bear, so long dormant, has awakened from his lethargy to snuff up delectable odors amid the palm groves of the Southern Ocean, nor that tho eagles of Franco will seek for prey or more genial eyries amid the inhospitable snows of...
